PROJECT: BROWNSLOW HOUSE

A MODERN BARN CONVERSION COMBINING TRADITIONAL EXPOSED BEAMS WITH MODERN DESIGN FEATURES FOR A SOPHISTICATED AND TRULY 'ENGLISH' FEEL

PROJECT OVERVIEW

This modern barn conversion with expansive views of the scenic North English countryside combines traditional exposed beams with modern design features for a sophisticated and truly 'English' feel.

HOW WE HELPED

Northbank Pine, one of our recent Rare Finds, was specified throughout the home, seamlessly flowing from room to room, balancing the large space.

These wide, long planks were reclaimed from a warehouse on the banks of the River Mersey (a famous river which runs through the North of England and was instrumental in the British industrial revolution) where they were being used as beams.

We brought the beams back to our restoration centre, where our artisans transformed them into a wide plank engineered floor that pairs historic reclaimed wood with modern construction technology. The boards were brushed and finished with Naked Skin Lacquer to ensure there was no colour change to the pale, elevated grain.

Claremont, from our Bold Surfaces portfolio, was used on the ceilings of the property.

OUTCOME

This floor has been in place for several years now and the patina is only growing richer and richer as it is walked upon by the family throughout its lifecycle. The wood will continue to mature, which is the beauty of a wooden floor, adding grace and poise as it ages.

By pairing reclaimed woods on the flooring and ceiling, the designer of this property has created a serene space which is perfect for modern family living, with the project providing a welcome link to the natural world and the past, without having to compromise on modern-day durability and stability.

OUR CERTIFICATIONS EXPLAINED - RECLAIMED SUSTAINABILITY

Reclamation is a principle incredibly dear to us at Woodworks.

Not only is it where we began and blossomed our woodworking skills, it represents our sustainability mindset. Reclaimed wood flooring and wall cladding reduces environmental impact through re-use.

The wood is salvaged from the reclamation site, be it a historical building, warehouse or colonial home, before being transformed into a reclaimed floor at our English workshops.

This gives reclaimed wood a continuous lifecycle.

Many years ago, it was manufactured and installed into old buildings. It would be maintained here for decades before demolition took place, which is the key stage for us.

From here we recycle the wood, putting it back into the manufacturing stage, restarting its lifecycle again and again and increasing the longevity of the wood.

Then, throughout the years the reclaimed wood can age gracefully within your project and can even be re-worked, re-sanded and re-finished to inject new life. This does not only give woods a new lease of life, but prevents the need for more excessive numbers of trees being chopped down.

Whenever the cycle should cease, the wood is 100% biodegradable, helping your project reach carbon neutrality.
